

On Saturday August 8, I went with Bradley to move a client from Nelson to Summerland. As we drove there Bradley informed me what we were going to be moving, a couple beds and couches, a love seat and 2 dressers. Not a lot to move, most likely an hour to load up.

When we got to the Nelson residence it was pretty full, one bedroom was completely packed. However as we were talking with the lady, she was quite clear that anything that did not fit, her and her husband would take in the 2 SUV's they have. She pretty much was on the same page that just as long as ~~the~~ her daughters bedroom set and the big stuff, pretty much what Bradley originally told me we were grabbing, was done than she was happy.

There was a big 6x2 cabinet in the living room that was still full of stuff needing to be emptied was left, but she said it was OK, they would just put it in the SUV. I even pointed at a table we could still fit and she said she would take it instead. All in all, she was happy and ~~at~~ everything she wanted us to bring we did, as usual. It did take us twice as long and we did grab some extras, but that is also pretty normal, since customers always want a little bit more, its just human nature.

We then took the long drive to Summerland, unloaded and Bradley tried to collect but the client said he would email transfer, so we went home. Everyone was happy as far as I could tell, another satisfied customer.
